

Contempt of Court

It painful to see such a lack of acknowledgement for Justice Antonin Scalia. The silence on the man and his life is deafening. It's as if a nuisance had passed, with all the chatter instead focused on replacing him. A Supreme Court Justice dies unexpectedly under strange circumstances, and that's not worth an autopsy? No, instead his body was whisked to the undertaker.

Who would imagine the death of an accomplished and important official could be treated with such nonchalance! Is this not news? Yet the press-vultures have chosen to obsess over those who voice concern with the manner in which Justice Scalia's death has been swept neatly away: We're "Conspiracy theorists." The same tired old ploy – smear tactics and misdirection.

America, you should be fed up with this. You should be demanding answers, not so much about the true nature of Justice Scalia's death – it's too late to perform an autopsy – but why our government has behaved in such a cavalier manner. It is nothing short of contempt, not just for Justice Antonin Scalia, but for the Truth.
