

Some Rhetorical Questions:

If a person or persons are present and aware when a crime is committed, and if they have the capability and sworn duty to prevent such a crime but do nothing, then are they not equally guilty of committing that crime as the person whose hands did the deed? The answer is obvious. This is logic 101. Basic Civics.

So what are we to make of a government which not only refuses to secure our borders – in defiance of its primary duty – but which offers incentives to trespassers, thus encouraging unhindered border-crossings of hundred-of-thousands of illegal aliens amongst whom untold numbers of terrorists have no doubt taken refuge? What is this if not an invitation to sabotage? And what is an invitation to sabotage if not sabotage itself?

With rarely more than a blink from most average Americans, the renegades in our government have grown accustomed to seeking their advantage at the expense of our Country. If they can shirk their sworn duties in broad daylight, what might they do under cover of darkness? What have they already done? By God in Heaven, think for a moment and realize what they have already done, and then raise your voice!

That average Americans fail to comprehend what is right under their collective nose is the deepest despair for the American Patriot.

With Liberty,
Dean Fachon