

Trump is popular because a great swath of Americans know something is seriously wrong with our Country. Most don't know what, but Trump is the vehicle for their consternation. That's a step in the right direction. Unfortunately, electing one man is not nearly enough. Americans need to fully understand what has been done to our Country, and then they must become actively involved in taking it back. At the very least, that means dumping the two-party system; purging Washington DC of career politicians by adopting term limits for elected and appointed officials; prosecuting corrupt financial institutions and adopting currency backed by gold, silver and a handful of other precious commodities while putting control of our money supply back under public control; ending our Country's empire-building foreign policy and extracting ourselves from wars promulgated by corrupt politicians.

And that's just for starters. We the People MUST get actively involved in our Nation's politics. To think voting alone is sufficient would be like feeding a baby once a week.
